JOYCE ZACEK IS WINNER OF KELLOGG FELLOWSHIP

MISSOULA--

Mrs. Joyce Zacek (pronounced Zaa-Check), assistant to the dean of the University of Montana Graduate School, has been named recipient of a $3,000 fellowship by the Kellogg Foundation for a three-year program of study and travel dealing with community leadership.

"The Kellogg Foundation hopes to improve the quality of life in Montana communities through the program," said Mrs. Zacek, who is one of 30 Montanans from a variety of professions who have been named fellowship recipients.

Travel for Mrs. Zacek and the other 29 participants won't be limited to Montana's borders. They also will travel nationally the second year and internationally the third year of the program.

Mrs. Zacek and the others will launch the fellowship program Sunday (Jan. 9) with a social hour at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Building at Montana State University, Bozeman. Classes, which begin Monday (Jan. 10), will be held on the MSU campus from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. daily of alternate weeks.

The program also is designed with social activities in mind. Participants will be encouraged to attend an opera, a symphony rehearsal, a basketball game, a play and several coffee hours.

The program will be conducted on alternate weeks during the first two months of 1972. Mrs. Zacek and the other participants will return to work in their respective communities the other weeks through February.

JOYCE ZACEK WINS FELLOWSHIP--2

Mrs. Zacek, a native of Hardin, was nominated for the Kellogg Fellowship as a result of her activities in the American Association of University Women (AAUW) in Montana. She plans to focus on the University of Montana's role in community services during the Kellogg Fellowship Program.

Mrs. Zacek, who is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Danielson, Hardin, is a graduate of Hardin High School.

Dr. LeRoy D. Luft, extension economist with the Cooperative Extension Service at MSU, is fellowship program coordinator.

MSU, the Cooperative Extension Service at MSU and the Kellogg Foundation are part of the cooperative effort to insure that the program is a success.
